South-Carolina GAZETTE.

From THURSDAY July 8th, to THURSDAY July 15th, 1756.

BRUSSELS, April 16.

THEY write from Liege, that the resident from France at that city has lately contracted with two persons for 60,000 muskets, which are to be delivered at Nantz on the 23d of next month.

Aix, April 6. The chaplain of a man of war at Toulon, a native of Ireland, is taken up for corresponding with the English.

London, April 24. The Hudson's Bay company are fitting out five ships for their service for the ensuing year.

All the hop-lofts and better sort of barns near Maidstone are taken up for the reception of part of the Hessian troops.

Yesterday 78 boys, cloathed by public subscription, after dining upon beef and pudding at Mr. Fielding's, were by justice Fielding and justice Welch presented to the lords commissioners of the admiralty, and approved of, and by them ordered to the care of admiral Osborn at Portsmouth: Their lordships expressed themselves well pleased with the neatness of the boys, their cleathing, and the uncommon chearfulness and joy they all expressed in being employed in his majesty's service.

London, April 27. Advices from the Hague say, that the late rumour of an alliance between the courts of Vienna and Vertailles is entirely groundless.

Two fire ships are certainly gone to join the fleet at Port Mahon.

On saturday, in St. James's park, the serjeants and corporals of the first regiment of foot guards, performed, for the first time, the manual exercise of the Prussians; and we hear all the regiments of this crown are to be instructed in the said exercise.

Brussels, April 20. At the request of a certain power, the garisons of Ostend and Nieuport are going to be reinforced, in order to secure those places from being surprised; and, to that End, near 100 cannon are to be sent thither from Mechlin.

People are at work night and day, in order to cleanse the port of Dunkirk.

London, April 29. They write from Brest, that the Heros man of war, of 74 guns, and the Leopard and Illustre, of 60 guns each, have sailed from thence, with 3 frigates, having on board the regiments La Sarre and Royal Roussillon: The marquis de Conflans squadron was in the road, waiting for the ships from Rochefort, and others that were to join him; and they were going to fit out another squadron of 8 ships of the line and 4 frigates, which is to be under the command of M. du Bois de la Mothe.

It is supposed, the squadron under commodore Keppel, which has not been heard of since its departure, has joined admiral Byng in a certain latitude, to go together up the Straits, where it is not improbable they may meet with the Toulon squadron.

We hear that divers barracks will speedily be erected for the soldiers, in several parts of the suburbs of this city, in case of an open war with France.

By letters from Port-Mahon of the 2d instant there is advice, that they had sent away to Barcelona all the wives and children of the officers of the garison, not knowing how soon they might receive a visit from the French.

Yesterday an express arrived at the admiralty, which, it is said, brought some accounts of consequence

Carthagena, March 30. The master of a ship which arrived here yesterday, and which touched at the island of Minorca, reports, that they were in expectation there of a visit from the French; but that every measure seemed to be taken for making a vigorous defence; that the town of Port Mahon, and the fort of St. Philip, were abundantly provided with every thing that might enable them to resist an attack, either by sea or land; that there was in the port when he left it, 2 large men of war, and 4 or 5 frigates; and that the governor had caused all suspected persons to go out of the place.

Paris, April 14. The ministry have altered their resolution with regard to the Brest fleet, on board of which M. de Moncalm, Dieskau's intended successor, is embarked. It will be composed of 4 men of war, viz. one of 74 guns; one of 64; one of 60; one of 56; and 4 frigates of 30 guns each. These men of war and frigates are divided into 2 divisions, the first of which sailed the 3d inst. and will be followed without delay by the second. Four battalions of regular troops, which are designed for Canada, went with the first division. A fire has done considerable damage at the port of Rochefort.

Turin, April 10. By the great dispatch which is used in fortifying Demont, Susa, Fenestrelles, and other frontier places, it is imagined the court perceives some storm gathering that may disturb the repose of Italy. Recruits are also raising to complete the king's troops, and it is reported that orders will be speedily given for augmenting them.

Port-Mahon, April 2. Provided the succours we expect from England arrive within 20 days after an attack begun by the French, we think ourselves able to hold out 'till then, and even longer; so that, if we are not relieved, our admiral's, or the winds, must be in fault. We foresee, that the French will bombard us with their fires; but our casemats, being cut in the rock, are bomb proof, and contrived so as to favour all our defensive operations.

Rome, April 15. Our parliament is very zealous at present, in promoting the maintenance of their laws, rights, and privileges, and have made several very spirited remonstrances against the proceedings of the court and clergy, which remains at present a very intricate affair.

LONDON, May 1.

WE hear there will be five camps, in the counties of Kent, Hants, Sussex, and Kent.

They write from Plymouth, that nothing has been done as yet about the fish ships, which are, it's said, about 40 in number.

Letters from Devonshire state, that a gentleman at Plymouth, suspected of a treasonable correspondence, is taken into custody by a messenger. And yesterday morning a person was brought to town in a coach and 4, guarded by 6 horsemen strongly armed.

Hanover, April 27. The troops of this electorate which are going to England, are to embark at Stade the 13th of next month.

London, May 4. Yesterday 40 boys cloathed by the grand association of Anti-Gallicans, went through the city, in order to be sent on board some of his majesty's fleet.

The exportation of gun-powder, salt petre, or any sort of arms or ammunition out of the kingdom, and the carrying the same coastwise (except for his majesty's service) during 6 months from the 29th of April is prohibited by an order in council.—[The passing of the bill, in consequence of which the above must take place, was a most refined piece of politics; for upon some advices received, that the French were endeavouring to buy up all the salt-petre that could be got, agents were appointed a short time since by the government, to purchase in Holland all that could be procured; which was accordingly done; when the French agents repaired thither upon the same errand, but being disappointed, employed Dutch agents to purchase all they could meet with from English merchants; which scheme, by the passing of this act, is rendered totally abortive.]

Letters from Dublin, import, that at the recommendation of the lord lieutenant of the kingdom of Ireland, the Irish regiments were ordered to be augmented 2 companies per regiment, and also 2 new regiments to be raised of foot, and 2 of dragoons. 'Tis added that upon the present juncture of affairs, the parliament of that kingdom have offered to concur, for the defence of his majesty's dominions, against the designs of France.

We hear that admiral Boscawen, (who passed by Plymouth last saturday) has delivered to every captain in the squadron a letter sealed up, which, 'tis supposed, contains a direction to rendezvous in a certain latitude, in case of being parted by a hard gale of wind.

Stade, April 24. The first division of the Hessian troops are embarking on board the British transports, the convoy to which, a man of war of 40 guns, dropt anchor before the Schwing, the day before yesterday. At the same time an occasional camp is traced out at a small distance from this city, for the use of the Hanoverian troops designed to pass over into Great-Britain.

London, May 6. At length an account is come of the long-threatened invasion of the island of Minorca, where the French, according to their own account, arrived on the 18th of last month, and landed the next day, which was inserted in the Paris Gazette of saturday last, the account coming from the duke de Richelieu to the court of Versailles in 10 days. This morning's papers inform us, that the French expected to be at Mahon in 3 days from their landing, which we suppose is meant after completing the landing of their large train of artillery and draught-horses, which cannot be completed so as to arrive in 3 days at Mahon, such disembarkations usually taking up more time than their puffing account of being at Mahon on the 21st seems to allow. The distance from Ciutadella to Mahon is 30 miles, to which place there is a fine road made by Gov. Kane, when he commanded there.

Ciutadella is surrounded with a wall, and has some other fortifications [illegible] by the Spaniards, which have been [illegible] since the English have had possession, only affording quarters for a small [illegible] of troops, whose orders are upon every alarm to march directly to Mahon, drive all the cattle before them, and spoil the roads to hinder the march of an enemy, and prevent them carrying forward their artillery. Therefore as 30 miles are always called 3 days march for an army without these inconveniencies, it must be supposed with them it must be protracted to a much larger time.

As destroying the roads will gain time for our fleet to arrive, therefore it occasions less uneasiness for the fate of this event; and as admiral Byng was met on the 9th off cape Ortegal, near cape Finisterre, and the usual time of performing the voyage from thence to Gibraltar is from 4 to 6 or 7 days, taking the greatest length of time, he arrived at Gibraltar on the 16th. From thence to Mahon is about 160 leagues, which with a fair wind is often done in 3 days; but supposing they should meet with a Levant wind wind, which is frequently the cafe after getting thro' the gut, and it would lengthen the voyage to 6 days, he may arrive time enough to join the fleet, which was from the Fr. ch cast coast to St. Philip's. — On the first talk of this squadron, commodore Keppel was sent out with 5 ships and a regiment of foot, which was 14 days before admiral Byng: his arrival therefore must have been before the French fleet.

All the ships that were cruising up the Mediterranean being ordered to join, there is no doubt, but admiral Byng's fleet is so much superior to the enemy, that we shall soon have a good account of that expedition, and that gentleman's memory be as much revered by his king and country, as his father's, the late lord viscount Torrington, for destroying the Spanish fleet in 1718, when they went to Sicily upon such another expedition.

Perhaps a great deal of the anxiety which has been shewn by the public upon this momentous affair will be alleviated, when they are acquainted, that the passage by sea thro' France for an express, is the reason of our not receiving any later dispatches from thence than from Minorca, by way of Leghorn, being 12 days coming; and from Barcelona, thro' Spain to the Hague, not from thence by the packet, rather longer. The way by sea is very uncertain; which ought to induce all persons to suspend their uneasiness till an account can arrive to our government.

We are informed that 10 Irish regiments are to be raised immediately.

The new intrenchments at Chatham are in great forwardness, several of the bastions, &c. being finished; and it is said, that 10,000 men are to be encamped with the militia.

Several of the Hessian officers are arrived in town from Holland.

According to advices received at Dunkirk from other ports of France, privateers are ready to put to sea, and in greater numbers than was at first believed, particularly from Nantz and St. Malo.

Admiralty Office, May 8. By a letter from the hon. Augustus Hervey, capt. of his majesty's ship the Phœnix, dated from Villa Franca, April the 18th, there is advice, That he was sent from Minorca by commodore Edgcumbe to Leghorn, to take in stores, and had proceeded to Villa Franca, in order to receive any letters he should find there from England for the commodore; that finding the French fleet had sailed from Toulon on the 13th for the island of Minorca, he intended sailing that evening, and endeavouring to get into the harbour of Mahon; or, if it should be so blocked up by the French as to make it impossible for his ship to get in, he should contrive some other manner to convey to admiral Edgcumbe the news of a fleet being actually sailed from England to their assistance and relief, and conduct proceedings: That if he should not be able to receive those orders he would then go away for Gibraltar, and cruize in the Gut in hopes of meeting the English fleet. He sends also the following list of the French fleet, viz.

List of Battle Ships.

Le Foudroyant	80	Le Triton	64
La Courronne	74	Le Lyon	64
Le Redoutable	74	Le Content	64
Le Hercule	64	Le Sage	64
L'Actaule	64	L'Alcion	50

Frigates.

La Pomone	36	La Gracieuse	24
Le Zephir	30	La Nymphe	20
La Rose	30

All of the transports, 90 of which are Tartans and Barks: They have a Mahonese zebequin, which is to serve as a pilot for the coast.

He said, That the whole number of troops, labourers, &c. &c. &c. shut up in the castle of St. Philip, amounted to 6000 men; that the French army did not exceed 11,000; so that he thinks the attack on the east side of St. Philip, will scarce be effectual, before the fleet, under admiral Byng, will probably arrive; and that all necessary precautions were taking when he left Mahon, for the defence of fort St. Philip, and the best disposition made for that of the harbour.

Amsterdam, April 23. The French East India company, the chief centre of the wealth of the state, have been very unfortunate in an enterprize from which they had great expectations. They had fitted out, without noise, at port L'Orient, 10 stout ships, 2 dockers, which were ready to sail for the East Indies, when admiral Hawke, after advice being received of this armament in England, came and took his station in such manner as to hinder them from sleeping out of port. If he continues any time on this station, the French cannot double the cape of Good Hope this season; which must be a mortal blow to their East India company.

London, May 9. On thursday there was a great council at Kensington.

Letters from Brussels, by a Flanders mail which arrived yesterday, say, that the marshal duke de Richelieu had wrote to court, since his arrival at Minorca, for a reinforcement of 4000 troops; which they say, are to be sent him under convoy of 7 ships of the line and 3 frigates fitting out at Toulon.

A few days ago the Ambuscade man of war of 40 guns going to look into Havre de Grace, 2 French frigates, of 30 guns each, slipt their cables, came up with her, and poured a broadside into her, which killed 30 men, and probably would have taken her, had not the Ilis of 60 guns, who was then in sight, bore down towards the Frenchmen, and made them retire into port.

Yesterday the earl of London kissed his majesty's hand on his departure for America; as did also Thomas Pownall, Esq;

LONDON, May 11.

Saturday morning arrived at Spithead, the St. George, admiral Hawke, Dunkirk, Edinburgh, Medway, and Torbay. Yesterday Sir Edward arrived at his house in town.

It is affirmed that admiral Hawke was relieved by admiral Boscawen.

On the 20th instant 5 men of war, destined for the Mediterranean, are to sail from Spithead, with the ships in the Portugal trade, &c. under convoy.

We hear that some light vessels have been dispatched for St. Helena, with directions for the homeward-bound Indiamen that shall arrive there, to wait 'till such time as sufficient convoy shall arrive there to conduct them safe to England.

A letter from Dunkirk says, that no less than 7 English merchants are in custody for holding a correspondence with England.

Yesterday several officers of the American regiments took the oaths in the court of king's-bench in Westminster Hall.

We hear that war will be declared against France in a few days, and that a bill will be immediately brought into the house for selling off all the French prizes; and some people pretend, that war was to be proclaimed in France as yesterday, or some day this week.

Paris, May 2. Orders have been sent to draw together all the seamen in the different ports of the South of France, and to send them to Toulon, in order to embark them for reinforcing the squadron which is now before Minorca. Some people give out, that the scheme for reducing that island is, properly speaking, a scheme of finance, and that it will be immediately put into the hands of Spain, in consequence of their paying down 20,000,000 of livres ready money. The prince de Soubize is returned hither from Dunkirk, in pursuance of an order from court.

Brussels, May 2. By private letters from Dunkirk, it is affirmed, that there is all appearance of a speedy embarkation of troops in that harbour; tho' to what expedition intended is a profound secret.

Paris, May 1. The arrival of the king's fleet at Minorca being the capital point from whence the other operations concerted in the cabinet are to result, a couriers have been dispatched from Versailles to Brest, with orders concerning that fleet and its future destination.

They write from Rochefort, that orders had been received from court to erect a fort and batteries on the isle of Aix, that place being the least guarded of all the Western coast of the kingdom.

We have advice that the 4 frigates, which were blocked up 15 or 20 days in the port of Cherbourg by several English men of war, are at length got safe to Brest with all the transports under their convoy. Two frigates are gone to L'Orient, to take on board 300 workmen of all kinds, whom they are to transport to Louisbourg.

Toulon, April 21. We are at work with the utmost diligence in fitting out the men of of war which remained here, after the departure of the squadron for Minorca. These men of war are destined to join the marquis de la Galissoniere about the time that 'tis supposed the English squadron, commanded by admiral Byng, will arrive in the Mediterranean.

Hague, May 5. An express is gone to London with advice that the transports, on board of which the Hessian troops embarked on the Elbe, sailed the day before yesterday for England.

Stockholm, April 26. The king having resolved to give to the commerce and navigation of his subjects all the protection which every power has a right and is even obliged to give them in such critical conjunctures as the present; his majesty has caused proper instructions to be drawn up for the commandant of the squadron destined to cover and protect our merchantmen. By these instructions he is charged to convoy them on all occasions when it may be wanted; to take favourable stations to protect them; not to suffer them to be disturbed or molested, on pretence of contraband, or under any other pretext whatever; and to fight any men of war of any nation that may pretend to arrogate to itself in particular certain rights which ought to be enjoyed in common by every kingdom and state that is able to arm or equip a ship.

Toulon, April 24. Notwithstanding the prodigious quantity of stores and provisions taken on board the numerous fleet lately sailed to Minorca, several transports, with live cattle, and corn on board, are preparing to be dispatched as soon as we receive positive advice of the success of that armament. The certainty of our being block'd up in that island, by a numerous fleet of the enemy, has determined the marshal de Richelieu to have upwards of twelve months provision, as well for the troops as the natives of that barren island.

London, May 13. A letter from on board one of our cruizers in the bay of Biscay, takes notice, that Danish, Swedish, and Dutch ships, daily pass by them, going to and from the ports of France; all which must be suffered to pass without search or visit, as there is yet no declaration of war between Great Britain and France.

Last night and this morning there was a very smart press for seamen on the river.

Ciudadilla, in Minorca, April 21. The French troops having landed here the 18th instant, and the town having surrendered after the retreat of the English garison, the marshal duke de Richelieu ordered some companies of grenadiers to take possession of it. The marshal soon after came ashore with the [illegible]

...la Galliſoniere and the principal officers of the army, and received the compliments of the burghers, to whom he made this ſhort ſpeech: "Gentlemen, we are not come to attack you. The king my maſter, in ſending me hither, intends only to revenge the outrages and inſults of the Engliſh. You may depend on my protection, and that I will take care to make my troops obſerve order, and do no damage to any body, but pay for every thing they may want: But, above all things, hold no correſpondence with our enemies for I ſhall ſpare none that are guilty of it." This day the heavy artillery ſets forward towards St. Philip's fort. The count de la Galliſoniere's ſquadron has juſt weighed anchor, in order to go and block up the harbour of Mahon, and wait for admiral Byng's ſquadron, which he has orders to fight if it appears there. The Minorquis ſeem to agree very well with the French, and have given proofs of their good-will towards them, in helping to land their troops, and to tranſport the artillery, and in bringing all kinds of proviſions to the camp. Their lively temper and gay humour ſympathize pretty well with the French.

Paris, May 3. A ſecond expreſs from marſhal duke de Richelieu brings advice, that the Engliſh had abandoned a ſmall fort which defends Forneli, a ſeaport at the bottom of a little bay on the Eaſt ſide of the iſland, into which he had ſent a garriſon. That Meſſrs. du Meſnil and de Monteynard, lieutenant generals, were ſent out on the 20th of April, with 24 companies of grenadiers and the royal brigade, to encamp at Mercade, which is ſomewhat more than half-way from Ciutadella to Port Mahon; that the reſt of the army, and a part of the heavy artillery, were to join them next day: And that the tranſports were to anchor in the port of Forneli.

Twenty-five battalions are ordered to march to Toulon, and wait there for farther orders. Some people think they are deſigned to reinforce Richelieu's army in caſe of need, and to enable him, after finiſhing the conqueſt of Minorca, to undertake another expedition, of which a few weeks will give us information.

Liege, May 5. By the laſt letters from Paris, we are informed, that the declaration of war, which was ſome time ago expected to be made againſt the Engliſh, will in a few days take place, his majeſty intending to let that public inſtance of his reſentment be accompanied by as ſtriking a one of his power.

London, May 15 On tueſday a meſſage was ſent by his majeſty to both houſes of parliament, ſignifying, "That his majeſty being deſirous to be prepared againſt all attempts and deſigns whatſoever that may be formed by his enemies in the preſent critical conjuncture, and conſidering that ſudden emergencies may ariſe, which may be of the utmoſt importance, and be attended with the moſt pernicious conſequences, if proper meaſures ſhould not be immediately applied to prevent or defeat them; his majeſty hoped, that he ſhould be enabled by his parliament to concert and take ſuch meaſures as may be neceſſary to diſappoint or defeat any enterprizes or deſigns of his enemies, and as the exigency of affairs may require." For which meſſage both houſes voted a loyal and dutiful addreſs.

We can't learn, with any certainty, what day War will be DECLARED, but it is generally thought it will be one day next week.

According to the lateſt advices from Minorca, which bear date April 29, the trenches were opened before St. Philip's fort the 23th, and between that day and the 29th, the French had loſt 900 men, among whom there was a lieutenant-general. On the other hand, 'tis ſaid the Engliſh have been unſucceſsful in a ſally, which has coſt them 150 men, among whom there were 50 ſailors. All the fighting men in the garriſon are computed at 1700 men; and the French expected a reinforcement of 4 ſhips of the line and 3 frigates by the 3d or 4th of May. It appears by this account, that commodore Edgecumbe's ſquadron is block'd up in the harbour, and all the ſailors belonging to it are employed in defending St. Philip's fort.

It is reported, that Lord Kelly is come over from France to England, to make ſome important diſcoveries.

Letters from on board admiral Boſcawen's fleet, adviſe, that there were 12 ſhips of the line at Breſt, ready for ſailing; and that the admiral was lying off that port to engage them, if they came out.

CHARLES-TOWN, July 15.

On Monday laſt His Excellency the Governor went to view the Condition of Fort Johnſon; having before viewed all the Works about this Town.

Laſt Sunday paſſed by this Bar, a Ship from St. Kitt's for Georgia, one Green Maſter.
